Chicago Style Format

Structure

Format and Punctuation

Times New Roman, 12 pt. font should be used for the body text, and 10 pt. font should be used for footnotes and endnotes. Text should be left justified. All margins should be one inch. Do not use Sans Serif fonts. Titles of works that end with a question mark or exclamation point should be followed by a comma if the grammar of the sentence would normally call for one, or in a source citation or in an index, if a comma would normally follow the title. The plural of a word in quotation marks is formed by adding –s or –es within the quotation marks. If a URL is so long that it must be broken within in printed works, break it before a slash (/).

Headings and Sub Headings

When using headings:

- Make flush with the left margin
- Capitalize the first and last words, as well as any major words (proper nouns)
- Lowercase articles – a, an, & the
  - Lowercase prepositions regardless of length except when: stressed (A River Runs Through It), used adjectively or adverbially (Look Up, Look Down), used in a conjunction, part of a Latin expression adjectivally or adverbially (De Fact; In Vitro)

When using subheadings:

- Each, except the lowest level, should be on a line above the following body text
- The lowest level heading should be a run-in heading, which is on the same line as the body text, is often in italics, and is in sentence style (the first word capitalized and is concluded with a period)
- When numerous levels are used, levels of subheadings must be distinguished by type style, such as italics versus regular or bold (don’t use all capitals), and each corresponding level of subheading must be in the same style
- Excepting run-in headings, never conclude with a period

Note: the first sentence after a subheading should not refer syntactically to the subheading.

Quotations:

When to use block quotes:

- Block quotations are necessary if the text makes eight or more lines in the document (100 words or more.)
- Block quotations are not set off by quotation marks and always start a new line with the document.
- Block quotations should be one inch from the regular margins, unless noted otherwise.
• Other text needing to be set off includes quoting two or more paragraphs, quoting letters with salutations or signatures, lists, any material that requires special formatting, and almost always poetry.

• Block quotations should always reflect the paragraphing of the original. If the opening of a quoted paragraph is not included, the quote will begin flush left and subsequent paragraphs are indented. If flush in the original, keep it that way. However, if you begin the quote as a run-in, it should only be done when there is text that intervenes with the remainder of the quote.

• Text after a block quotation that continues a paragraph is flush left, but if a new paragraph, it is indented.

Citation

There are two citation styles in Chicago style:

1. Notes and Bibliography
2. Author-Date System

When you use an idea that is not your own, put a footnote or citation at the end of the sentence, depending on which style you are using.

Footnotes and Endnotes

Footnotes appear at the bottom of the page, and endnotes appear at the end of a chapter or section of a book. Footnotes and endnotes are indicated in the same way, by a superscript number which has a corresponding note that mimics the format of a bibliography entry\(^1\). If both footnotes and endnotes are used in the same section, then footnotes are indicated by a dagger (†) or an asterisk (*), and endnotes will still use numbers. The number in the footnote must always correspond with the number in the text.

Footnote numbers will always go in numerical order. If the same source is used multiple times, a new footnote number must be used. DO NOT REUSE THE FOOTNOTE NUMBER. Simply refer back to the previous note (i.e. \(^5\) see footnote 3). This rule is the same for endnotes.

Sample Citations

When citing a source for which the author is mentioned in the text of the sentence, only note the date and page number from the source.

Sentence: Jones notes the prevalence of fish in Lake Superior but fails to mention which subspecies comprise the population.

Footnote: \(^1\) “Lake Land Tours,” (St. Paul, Mifflin, 2011), 26

In-text: (2011, 26)

---

\(^1\) Author’s first name Author’s last name, Title of Source (City of Publication, Publishing Company, year), page number

SiUC Writing Center

write.siuc.edu
For a source with no author given, use the title, as such:

Footnote: ¶I Love Everything¶ (Cincinnati, Ridic Books, 2001), 19
In-text: (I Love Everything 2001, 19)

When citing a website, give all the info you can, but don’t worry about page numbers if there are none:

In-text: (Lindle)

Books with 2-3 authors are formatted in this manner:

Footnote: ¶James Irving, James Lindle, Arnold Palmer, We Make Stuff Better (Chicago, Old Guy Publishers, 2009), 717¶
In-text: (Irving, Lindle, Palmer 2009, 171)

Books with four or more authors format using the ‘et. al.’ abbreviation:

Footnote: ¶James Irving et. al., I Hate (New York, Angry Works, 2010), 119¶
In-text: (Irving et. al. 2010, 119)

Communicative sources like email or conversation need the person interviewed or corresponded with, the date, and any other pertinent information:

Footnote: ¶Jimmy Brisket, e-mail to author, November 16, 2006¶
In-text: (Brisket 2006)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Book

One author

Two or more authors

For four or more authors, list all of the authors in the bibliography; in the note, list only the first author, followed by et al. (“and others”):

Editor, translator, or compiler instead of author

Editor, translator, or compiler in addition to author

Chapter or other part of a book

SIUC Writing Center

write.siuc.edu

Chapter of an edited volume originally published elsewhere (as in primary sources)

Preface, foreword, introduction, or similar part of a book

Book published electronically
If a book is available in more than one format, cite the version you consulted. For books consulted online, list a URL; include an access date only if one is required by your publisher or discipline. If no fixed page numbers are available, you can include a section title or a chapter or other number.

Journal article
Article in a print journal

Article in an online journal
Include a DOI (Digital Object Identifier) if the journal lists one. A DOI is a permanent ID that, when appended to http://dx.doi.org/ in the address bar of an Internet browser, will lead to the source. If no DOI is available, list a URL. Include an access date only if one is required by your publisher or discipline.

Article in a newspaper or popular magazine
Newspaper and magazine articles may be cited in running text (“As Sheryl Stolberg and Robert Pear noted in a New York Times article on February 27, 2010, . . .”) instead of in a note, and they are commonly omitted from a bibliography. The following examples show the more formal versions of the citations. If you consulted the article online, include a URL; include an access date

SiUC Writing Center
write.siuc.edu
only if your publisher or discipline requires one. If no author is identified, begin the citation with the article title.

Book review

Thesis or dissertation

Paper presented at a meeting or conference

Website
A citation to website content can often be limited to a mention in the text or in a note (“As of July 19, 2008, the McDonald’s Corporation listed on its website . . .”). If a more formal citation is desired, it may be styled as in the examples below. Because such content is subject to change, include an access date or, if available, a date that the site was last modified.

Blog entry or comment
Blog entries or comments may be cited in running text (“In a comment posted to The Becker-Posner Blog on February 23, 2010, . . .”) instead of in a note, and they are commonly omitted from a bibliography. The following examples show the more formal versions of the citations. There is no need to add pseud. after an apparently fictitious or informal name. (If an access date is required, add it before the URL; see examples elsewhere in this guide.)

E-mail or text message
E-mail and text messages may be cited in running text (“In a text message to the author on March 1, 2010, John Doe revealed . . .”) instead of in a note, and they are rarely listed in a bibliography. The following example shows the more formal version of a note.

Item in a commercial database

For items retrieved from a commercial database, add the name of the database and an accession number following the facts of publication. In this example, the dissertation cited above is shown as it would be cited if it were retrieved from ProQuest’s database for dissertations and theses.

REFERENCES

Book

One author

Two or more authors

For four or more authors, list all of the authors in the reference list; in the text, list only the first author, followed by et al. (“and others”):

Editor, translator, or compiler instead of author

Editor, translator, or compiler in addition to author

Chapter or other part of a book

Chapter of an edited volume originally published elsewhere (as in primary sources)

Preface, foreword, introduction, or similar part of a book

Book published electronically
If a book is available in more than one format, cite the version you consulted. For books consulted online, list a URL; include an access date only if one is required by your publisher or discipline. If no fixed page numbers are available, you can include a section title or a chapter or other number.

Journal article
Article in a print journal
In the text, list the specific page numbers consulted, if any. In the reference list entry, list the page range for the whole article.

Article in an online journal
Include a DOI (Digital Object Identifier) if the journal lists one. A DOI is a permanent ID that, when appended to http://dx.doi.org/ in the address bar of an Internet browser, will lead to the source. If no DOI is available, list a URL. Include an access date only if one is required by your publisher or discipline.

Article in a newspaper or popular magazine
Newspaper and magazine articles may be cited in running text (“As Sheryl Stolberg and Robert Pear noted in a New York Times article on February 27, 2010, . . .”), and they are commonly omitted from a reference list. The following examples show the more formal versions of the citations. If you consulted the article online, include a URL; include an access date only if your publisher or discipline requires one. If no author is identified, begin the citation with the article title.

Book review

SIUC Writing Center
write.siuc.edu

Thesis or dissertation

Paper presented at a meeting or conference

Website
A citation to website content can often be limited to a mention in the text (“As of July 19, 2008, the McDonald’s Corporation listed on its website. . .”). If a more formal citation is desired, it may be styled as in the examples below. Because such content is subject to change, include an access date or, if available, a date that the site was last modified. In the absence of a date of publication, use the access date or last-modified date as the basis of the citation.

Blog entry or comment
Blog entries or comments may be cited in running text (“In a comment posted to The Becker-Posner Blog on February 23, 2010, . . .”), and they are commonly omitted from a reference list. If a reference list entry is needed, cite the blog post there but mention comments in the text only. (If an access date is required, add it before the URL; see examples elsewhere in this guide.)

E-mail or text message
E-mail and text messages may be cited in running text (“In a text message to the author on March 1, 2010, John Doe revealed . . .”), and they are rarely listed in a reference list. In parenthetical citations, the term personal communication (or pers. comm.) can be used.

Item in a commercial database
For items retrieved from a commercial database, add the name of the database and an accession number following the facts of publication. In this example, the dissertation cited above is shown as it would be cited if it were retrieved from ProQuest’s database for dissertations and theses.